Dear Chairmen Kingston and Harkin and Ranking Members Shelby and DeLauro:

The 60 undersigned organizations of the Health Professions and Nursing Education Coalition (HPNEC) write to urge you to preserve full funding for the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA)'s Title VII health professions and Title VIII nursing workforce development programs as you finalize the FY 2013 appropriations bills. HPNEC is an informal alliance of national organizations dedicated to ensuring the health care workforce is trained to meet the needs of the country's growing, aging, and diverse population.

In 2013, the programs will celebrate their 50th anniversary, and part of their longstanding success can be attributed to their ability to adapt and respond to the country's changing health care needs. Today, we have a nation that is growing and becoming increasingly diverse. Further, the country faces a rapidly growing, aging population and millions more Americans seeking access to care.

Titles VII and VIII ensure the nation is equipped with a workforce to provide well-coordinated, quality care, to alleviate primary care provider shortages, and to improve access to care for all populations. Diversifying the health care workforce is a central focus of the Title VII and VIII programs, making them a key player in the fight to mitigate racial, ethnic, and socio-economic health disparities, which are estimated to cost the nation $363.1 billion by 2050.

Further, the Bureau of Labor Statistics predicts the health care sector will be one of the fastest growing in terms of jobs. In a difficult economy, Title VII and Title VIII play an important role in guiding individuals to high-demand health professions jobs, fulfilling both their individual career goals and a community's health needs.

Yet, continued cuts threaten to reverse the programs' progress to date in increasing the supply, distribution, and diversity of the health professions workforce and increasing access to care for children, adults, and seniors. While we recognize the challenges you face in a difficult budget environment that continues to target discretionary spending, these programs cannot sustain further reductions. We urge you to preserve the relatively modest investment in Titles VII and VIII, and we look forward to working with you to ensure the continuation of Congressional support for programs in FY 2013.

Sincerely,
